Real Danger of Racial War

LONDON (CP) - Canada's nonwealth secretariat, says failure to solve the Rhodesian crisis on an equitable basis could gravely weaken the Com-monwealth and the United Nations and destroy African trust in the West, including Canada and the United States.

'The dangers of eventual racial war in central and southern Africa would be increased," the secretary-general said in an interview setting out his position on an issue which has become a sensitive, central factor in international relations between the white man and the Negro. The Toronto - born diplomat who has visited Africa twice and plans to visit Asia next fall believes that "a very deter-mined effort" has been made to bring the Ian Smith rebellion in

Coming to Grips

Wilson's Labor government has position in parliament gives a great tenure of office hung by a handful of votes.

Of chief interest to Britons, of course, is the renewed proposal for nationalization of the steel industry. Deferred during the last parliament as a result of strong opposition, the socialist move would implement one of the traditional planks of the Labor Party and a prime objective of a large segment of Mr. Wilson's followers.

Whether government control of the steel industry will solve any of the major production and export problems now facing Britain is another matter. The same factors of capital, labor, modernization of plant and productivity will prevail, along with the vital element of efficiency in both management and working force. At any rate it will be an opportunity for Labor to prove its theories-with four years to explain why if reality falls short of expectations.

Control of wages and profit will continue to be a salient feature of government economic policy, and aid to "new and faltering" industries is promised in cases where the country as a whole would benefit by a company's prosperity. A gesture to elements in Britain which are critical of United States granted a fair chance.

DRIME MINISTER HAROLD policy, particularly in Viet Nam, may be read into the vague underset forth its program for the coming taking to "use all available means to session and the dominance of its achieve a negotiated settlement" of the conflict there. That could mean deal more meaning to the plan of nothing more than a continuance of battle than when the government's the present tacit support of American policy.

The government will seek to maintain NATO as a necessary basis for East-West stability, despite France's determination to withdraw from the defensive structure. And a friendly but indecisive move is made toward the European Common Market, a field in which "essential British and Commonwealth interests" must be safeguarded.

The government's policy in regard to Rhodesia will continue to be to bring the illegal regime to an end, with "a peaceful and lasting constitutional settlement." Five months of the present methods have not yet achieved that end, but the government does not indicate in what way the means may be improved. It must have heavily on its mind, however, the increasingly insistent demand of the African states for military measures against Rhodesia's rebel regime.

Mr. Wilson's list of problems has not appreciably changed. What has changed is his parliamentary power to deal with them. His majority of 97 gives him much greater scope to implement his policies - as it gives him greater responsibility for their outcome. At any rate, he will not be able to say that he was not

The Shape of Things To Come MR. ARTHUR GOLDBERG, THE

United States ambassador to the United Nations, is a clever man. When he claims, therefore, that the United States is now just about ready to agree to a UN seat for Communist China on a "two Chinas" basis, he must know that he is speaking about an impossibility.

In a recent speech to the National Press Club in Washington, delivered minutes after he had conferred with President Johnson, Mr. Goldberg declared that the administration was "anxious to have Communist China join the mainstream of the international community." But Peking must first, he added, recognize the legitimacy of the Chiang Kai-shek regime on Formosa.

Peking, of course, will not recognize the legitimacy of the Nationalist regime any more than Chiang Kai-shek will admit that he is no longer the ruler of China. The result is the same impasse as before, but the United States obviously hopes to gain some international credit for trying to ease tensions.

Perhaps in the long run the key of Formosa itself after Chiang Kai- regarded as foreigners.

shek, now 78 years old, dies. The Formosans themselves may choose eventually to assert their own sovereignty and no longer perpetuate the myth that their government represents mainland China.

Just last month, Generalissimo Chiang won his sixth uncontested four-year term of office as president, along with continuing use of total dictatorial powers for the duration of the "communist rebellion." For over 18 years the 10 million native Formosans have been subjected to the rule of about onefifth their number of now-aging remnants of the Nationalist mainland refugees who have been sustained only through the power of the United States. The people of Formosa in all that time have never been asked what their choice of government would be or whether they really want to have a representative in the UN sitting as the delegate of China.

For the sake of its commitments the United States cannot be expected to withdraw support from Chiang Kai-shek now. But when he goes the obvious move would be to work for an independent Formosa, ruled by Formosans rather than mainto the problem will be the situation land Chinese who have always been Dewey ternational "s p i v s" was much more than a tactical victory in the dreary sanctions war against Rhodesia. In a tactical sense, indeed, shutting off a potential source of oil supplies to Rhodesia had to be counted a minor victory so long as the main overland routes from South Africa re-mained unaffected.

Still, with little risk of overdrama tizing the situation, what happened off Beira can be described as a major turning point in the African crisis. The day the Royal Navy boarding party hove to alongside the Ionna V was the day the hand-wringing stopped. Britain had a least "done" something, what is more, that something was direct, physical and of inestimable psychological importance to an island people-it was done on the

Changed Mood

By the time the second pirate tanker, Manuela, was turned back by a second boarding party-this one armed with UN authority as well as in the literal sense—there was no mistaking the changed mood in Britain. With sub-editors hastily dragging out their rusting editors hastly dragging out the transling nautical terminology to write swash-buckling captions for pictures of bearded naval captains and deadly-looking frigates, one would have thought that Nelson and Benbow had come back to re-establish mastery of the waves.

The country's editorial writers, quick to find their sea legs, were agreed for once that the right thing had been done at the right time and in the right place, "So far" exulted the Guardian, "Britexulted the Guardian sin's intentions have been as clear as they are honorable." Hide It in Public

If there is any dirt to hide in the Munsinger, or other pending cases, let us have it all out in public. Our government has lost most of its good image anyway, and it is high time for a real clean-up, no matter who gets hurt, -E. W. Abraham, 1125 Faithful.

Giving My Money Away British courts established long ago the incontrovertible principle that parliament, being the nation's supreme authority, has the inherent power to take away one man's property and give it to another. Under Canada's federal constitution, that power is vested in the rovincial legislatures, since the provinces are assigned jurisdiction over property and civil rights. Any doubt about this was removed when the courts found themselves incompetent to interfere with the act of the B.C. legislature depriving owners of the Dolly Varden mine of their prop-

This constitutional point is important the moment because it is this basic and inherent power that Premier Ben nett plans to exercise in his proposed home builders' grant. He proposes to take my money and give it to somebody else.—A Tenant.

It has all been pure gain for the Labor government. Before Beira, Prime Minister Harold Wilson's impetuous promises lay in ruins. Months had passed since he had prophesied a sanc-tions victory in a matter of weeks. Even the Conservative party's clamorous call for negotiations on any terms, desperate political contrivance though it may be, was beginning to look better than anything the government had to offer. Now, after Beira, all that has changed,

Mr. Wilson's first bonus came when the Conservatives, true unto death, fell out among themselves in their hurry to jump on the government for taking its troubles to the UN General Assembly Enoch Powell, the perennial outspoken shadow defence minister, burst into print with a scathing denunciation of the government move at a moment when the party enjoyed an ill-timed Roman holi-day and when the deputy leader, Reginald Maudling, was still trying to work out a position with the rest of the shadow cabinet. By the time an angry Mr. Heath had ordered Mr. Powell to start toeing the party line and Mr. Powell had got around to submitting, any opportunity of making quick capital out of the new developments had been lost.

By then, indeed, the crisis had moved into a new, more exciting and more dan-gerous phase. Emboldened by the case gerous phase. Emboldened by the case of Beira jitters that seem to have afflicted all of southern Africa, Mr. Wilson apparently started sniffing bigger game than pirate tankers. A flurry of diplomatic chasing back and forth between London, Lisbon and Pretoria seems to suggest, in fact, that he now has his sights fixed on shutting off the the Smith regime's overland supplies of

The wonder of it all is that this goal, which only a few weeks ago appeared to be so dismally remote, now seems both logical and feasible. The handwriting which appeared on the wall at Beira contained a message for South Africa and Portugal as well as for Rhodesia. There can be little doubt by now that all three countries have beeded it and that each has embarked on a nervous reappraisal of its position

Urgency New

For South Africa and Portugal, the dilemma is old but the urgency is new. Their attempt to balance the demands of white solidarity in southern Africa against the very real fear of being dragged under with Rhodesia met its test first at Beira and, later, when the Manuela docked at Durban. Both countries backed away from the challenge. For their part, the Rhodesians are showing the first signs of real doubt about their own chances of survival, and the Smith regime's angry decision to break its last diplomatic links with Britain has been viewed in London, at any rate, as the measure of its desperation.

The calculations have become im-mensely more complicated for the British government too, of course. But they are the happier calculations of a government which is at last moving and which feels, perhaps with justification, that it is moving in the right direction

Voices Of Quebec

New Party

new provincial party-the sixththe Quebec Conversative party, wants to take its place in the sun. Its temporary president, John F. Boyle, said this English-speaking party will present about 30 candidates in the next provincial election, especially in the Montreal region.

This party expects to devote itself to the defence of the interests of Quebec's Anglo-Saxon minority . . . Supposing this party does eventually become officially formed, it will find it very difficult to elect even a fistful of its candidates.

Carrying this hypothesis further, what influence could these few members really exercise submerged in the French whole of the legislative assembly?

It would not be necessary to con-clude from this that the Anglo-Saxon minority has no voice in the legislature. With electoral redistribution, it is possible for it to increase the number of its members. There are more constituencies where our compatriots of British expression are numerous enough to elect one of their own kind. Our fellow-countrymen, who long ago left provincial politics to us to settle into the world of industry, finance and business, are pragmatic enough -- if they feel they are really threatened - to choose another means to assert their rights, both more adequately and more easily.

Rather than group themselves apart on a small island and become an easy target for everyone, they will see fit to reinforce their position within the Liberal and Union Nationale parties so they can exercise a reasonable and logical influence there.

Election Theme

FROM WASHINGTON

McNamara Put the Power There

THE total number of combat aircraft in Latin America is 547. That's less than North Korea. The total number of tanks in Latin America is 974. That's 60 per cent as many as Bulgaria." It is someknow to the last digit the exact number of tanks in Latin America. It strains belief, this recondite statistic can then convert it into a percentage of the tank strength

Yet Robert S. McNamara produced the two foregoing sentences the other day, quite off the cuff, to prove that Senator Wayne Morse was talking through his hat about the excessive militarization of the Latin American countries. A little later, he showed another side in answer to a guns-versus-butter senatorial question.

He "felt deeply," he said with evi dent true meaning, that urgent social needs should not be neglected because of present defence requirements. And as an illustration of the sort of neglect that shocked him, he pointed out, with grim precision, that school libraries are g in no less than "fifty schools in the District of Columbia," which gives

Kilden 1.22 Byen, to the son

The chances are that Senator Morse, a member of the Senate's District Committee, could not have been so precise. Yet it is not news to anyone that in his mastery of facts and in many other ways, Robert S. McNamara is a e human phenomenon. What made the phenomenon so striking at the Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing, was its role in McNamara's confrontation with Senator William Fulbright. The senator is about give a series of lectures at Johns Hopkins on "The Arrogance of Power" and he was full of his future platform

Power and Arrogance

He kept asking McNamara whether he had ever heard of a nation that had attained great power without becoming "arrogant and self-rightepus." To be sure, the senator's historical logic was no better than is usually the case, as oles will show.

Imperial Rome may have been a bit self-righteous when Virgil wrote that the Roman role was to "protect the weak and pull down the over-proud." But in this respect Augustan Rome did not even begin to match the Ghana of Kwame Nkrumah. And if comparative hauteur is to be the test, the giant power France of Louis XIV stacks up rather favorably with the less powerful France of Charles de Gaulle

By JOSEPH ALSOP

Arguing about the logic of history unwise in senate committee rooms, however. Hence McNamara contented himself with observing that the United States had been neither arrogant nor self-righteous, without trying to answer Senator Fulbright's point. And despite the senator's extremely slipshod way of putting it, the fact has to be faced that he had a point.

The point is that although great power does not need to breed arrogance and does not need to breed allogate and self-righteousness, as Senator Fulbright seems to think, great power obviously does permit nations possessing it to take actions that may indeed be self-righteous Whereas the Nkrumahs and arrogant. of history, of whom there has been such an ample supply, cannot safely contem-plate such actions because they lack the selves in rodomontades.

What Fulbright was getting at, obviously, was that the American interven-tion in Viet Nam, which he thinks so wrong, was owing to the vastness of wrong, was owing to the vasiness of American power. And if you eliminate the senator's phoney moralistic trimmings, what he was getting at was, in some sense, true. You cannot rationally say that a tool had to be used just because if was there. But you can set because it was there. But you can say that the tool could not have been used, if it had not been there.

Hence Fulbright, thinking as he does. was not unjustified in imputing blame to McNamara. For the American power that was needed to intervene in Vie Nam most certainly would not have been there without McNamara's reform and modernization of the armed serv-And this vast and amazing administrative episode, which produced America's present deployable power, would also have been impossible without McNamara's unique and phenomenal

No Question on Strength

But the question Senator Fulbright did not ask the other day (and is un-likely to answer at Johns Hopkins) is whether it is an error for a nation like the United States to build great power. Like any strong tool, great power can become a dangerous tool. There is no doubt about that.

It is also dangerous, however, for any nation to engross so unequal a share of the world's good things as this country does today. That danger can only be met by the tool of power—unless, to be sure, Senator Fulbright wants to transfer two-thirds of the income of the voters of Arkansas to the Communist Chinese, who need the money so much more badly. In equity and logic, that should be his program, perhaps.

Two Views

In that country there are, essentially, two views of the presidency. Traditionally the great presidents have re-garded the constitutional limitations that surround the chief executive as a cage, to be raged against, bent, broken, battered with any instrument that comes to hand. As a result the standard of intellectual honesty and integrity expected of a president is less than that deman-

One is ethnic, sociological, cultural. In this sense, in English or in French, Scotland, Wales,

French Canada, even England, are all nations.

Kingdom and Canada are all nations.
"I am sometimes told, usually by people that I just don't understand French, that the French word nation can't be applied to Can-ada. Well, General de Gaulle, who presum-

Culturally, Canada is unmistakbly two nations:

politically, legally, constitutionally, just as unmistakably, one nation. Like it or lump it, that is the cold hard fact."

As for the practical nature of the act of

and admired the bars. What he could not do was not permissible, was sinful.

He was a man with all the right emotions. He hated war and violence of any sort and people who did not mean what they said. He had a simplistic military view of the political game-and it is a most skilful and exquisite game in the United States — which left him shaking with rage when it was played against him.

The late Adlai Stevenson eems a vulgar, ill-advised fellow in these pages because in the heat of a hopeless election campaign he criticized and struck out in a way that hurt. Any suggestion that the president was telling less than all the truth switched on with an almost audible click a tightly controlled, encrimsoned military rage that any to find the rendezvous will know. I have seen it make seasoned American reporters shake at the knees.

Moderate Man

He was a moderate man. He finds it necessary here to defend his action in sending orack federal troops to sober up the Little Rock mob (and its ambivalent governor) and let a few Negro adolescents into one of their high schools. He defends himself, not by moralizing but on the basis of the law:

"After the supreme court's 1954 ruling, I refused to say whether I approved or disap-proved of it (i.e., the ruling that separate but equal racial schools were illegal). The court's judgment was law, I said, and I would abide by it."

He was devoted to his friends. And, again, it is a military loyalty rather than a personal affection, between men who have shared the heat of a battle. John Foster Dulles was such a comrade Britain comes in for affecment. Suez comes as an agony to him. He saw it coming. He advises against it in a long prolix exchange of letters with Eden. And, reading between these and other of his lines, it begins to appear that the real greatness of Britain is to argue a poor

Help Rejected

Incidentally he insists that President Nasser had virtually rejected the offers of American help for the high dam before Dulles withdrew - thus starting the melancholy train of events that led to the Suez affair.

It is tempting to regard his consulate as a vast muddle. The crises here seem, page after page, to come boiling up over his desk.

In his 20 most busy days, he had the problems of his own re-election with its endless speeches. Suez and the Hungary rising. There was nothing fancy about his education and West Point did not tempt him into the pearl-handled, damn-my-allies, cock-capped sort of American generalship.

SAIGON - U.S. officials here expect South Viet Nam to remain in political turmoil for as long as another year.

The American mission in Saigon foresees little chance this country will get the strong central government it so badly needs in three, six or even 12 months.

Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's military regime now is setting up elections to give the country a parliament civilian government, But, according to informed sources, American experts see little likelihood that any one party will poll enough votes to and leadership.

For the Americans, it is a return of a nightmare.

South Viet Nam once before wobbled for a long time with a lack of strong government in Saigon. It was the period from August, 1964, until last June when Ky took power.

A Succession

Gen. Nguyen Khanh's regime fell in August, 1964. First a trio of generals took over. Then Premier Tran Van Huong, a chief of state and a 20-member legislature held Khanh tried a comeback. failed and was succeeded by Premier Phan Huy Quat who in June left the whole mess to

The period was notable in that the central government's influence was almost nil, Provincial and local governments kept the machinery of government moving. It was also then, in December, 1964, when the generals grew tired at the 20-man legislature's talk-talk-talk and arrested and banished the lawmakers.

It also was that wobbly rise in Viet Cong power and the resulting massive buildur of American power in Viet

There's No Need To Drown A Goodly Part of Alaska

The New York Times

Alaska, the largest of the fifty states, a magnificent wilderness empire stretching hundreds of miles north of the Arctic Circle, has long excited men's imaginations.

Not very surprisingly, Alaska is the suggested set-ting for the single most grandiose dam ever envisaged in North America. This is the posed Rampart Dam on Yukon River that would flood 8,000,000 acres, create a huge man-made lake 280 miles long and bigger than Lake Erie, cost approximately two billion dollars and take 30 years to complete.

The sponsors conceive of Rampart Dam as a magnet drawing aluminum plants and other industries in need of cheap hydro-electric power and transforming a wild remote, almost unpopu country into a busy, settled, money-making area, a veritable Texas of the North.

Splendid as the dream may be, a heavy barrage of facts has just shot it to the ground. The Natural Resources Council of America has released a detailed economic analysis of Rampart Dam prepared by a group of experts headed Dr. Stephen H. Spurr, dean of the University of Michigan graduate school.

The Spurr Report makes clear that Rampart Dam has little to recommend it except its monumental size and cost. The report stresses that lowcost power cannot "comper sate for lack of raw mater ials, unsuitable terrain, poor climate, distance from mar-kets, high labor costs, high cost of living . . . Cheap electricity is important, but its availability will not per-form miracles."

Since even in the case of aluminum, electricity represents only about 13 per cent of the gross value of production, the electricity generated by Rampart Dam would have to be given away free to offset the higher transportation and labor costs in Alaska.

As for Alaska's normal growth, the number of people could double in the next twenty years and their use for electricity could quadruple, and they still would not need more than one-fifth of the generating capacity that the Rampart Dam would provide.

The Ecology

The Spurr Report also evaluates the ecological aspects of the dam. Two years ago, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service advised against the dam, characterizing the adverse effects of birds. animals and fish as the worst of any project in the history and his colleagues not only confirm these apprehensions but also describe the earlier estimates of damage as "conservative.'

There is no need to drown a goodly part of Alaska in order to develop the rest of it industrially. The Spurr Report suggests several practical projects that could be undertaken immediately and that would enhance Alaska's prosperity effectively without creating an economic and ecological nightmare.

VANCOUVER (CP)—City fire officials have ruled out the possibility of arson in a house fire Thursday at the home of David Cowlishaw, self-styled leader of Underdog, an organization he founded to help the persecuted. At the moment, the question appears to be whether or not the pride and experience of veterans can overcome the enthusiasm and stamina of hockey youngsters.

Victoria coach Frank Mario is convinced that it can, although he admits the Leafs must overcome some problems as well as hustling, bustling Seals, who average less than 26 years of age, about six below the Maple Leaf average. ### Bookies Favor Habs in Final

MONTREAL (CP) - If it's any consolation to coach Toe Blake and his Montreal Canadiens, the men who study the form charts and set the odds have picked his club to repeat its winning Stanley Cup performance of last year.

Odds-makers pick Canadiens as 5-to-2 favorites to down Detroit Red Wings in the best-of-seven final, and a 13-to-5 choice to take the opening game of the round on Canadiens' home ice at 11:30 p.m. (PST) Sunday.

The Montrealers have been chosen on the strength of their strong drive to the league title, as compared to a stuttering Detroit effort that found the Wings.

"Without Steve Witiuk (sidelined with strained knee ligaments) we have no flexibility at all," Mario said. "We are going to have to skate harder and keep forcing them. Our players know what they have to do and if they can set the pace, nobody is going to beat them."

Forcing the Seals doesn't promise to be an easy assignment. ### HE'LL NEVER FORGET THOSE THREE NUMBERS

NEW YORK (AP)-A hunch bettor won $27,200 on the third race at Aqueduct Thursday after plunging on the licence plate numerals of a car that had held him up in traffic on the way to the track.

An unidentified man, who was too late to follow his usual custom of betting the dally double, cashed in win tickets worth $522 on the first two races before hitting it big in the third with $400 to win on a horse that paid $136 for $2.

The man had been caught in traffic behind a car with the licence number 669.

He put $20 on No. 6 in the first race, Gay Chatter, who returned $34.80 for $2. Then he parlayed the $174 on No. 6 in the second, Royal Victory, who paid $6.

Out of his $522 winnings, he bought four $100 win tickets on Silencer—No. 9 in the third race—and struck it rich.

INTO OVERTIME

But the Brentwood boys, in the fighting tradition of their predecessors, tied the score in the second half and forced overtime.

Against Brentwood, lained at home and abroad for their fine play, the Hornets demonstrated that cohesion, balance and spirit can overcome what many considered the impossible. In giving up a pair of proven, older pitchers for three youngsters of potential in a trade Thursday with Philadelphia Phillies, Chicago Cubs may in the long run have got the best of a deal that right now has everyone happy.

The struggle teeter-tottered until the last few seconds. Then Mount View's Dave Hutchings made a 20-yard run from a set everyone happy.

The British are noted for good taste. And so is British beer. Does this mean that Charrington Toby has MORE good taste than Canadian brews? No. It simply means that Britversity of California at Berkeley until she received a Bachelor of Arts degree in art history listen to her talk and you that while these were definite - components in the shaping of success, there was a much more powerful elixir that kept her moving steadily toward her goal. That is a deep and sincere love of art.

This love was born when she was a child, developed during her young womanhood and became an abiding in-terest when she maried Fred Pollard, who had been active in the raw silk market in Japan and who knew and loved Oriental art.

After Mr. Pollard's death the interest turned into a mis-sion that for some years has centred around the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria where Mrs. Pollard has placed more than 200 items in the Fred and Isabel Pollard Oriental Art Collection and where she in tends to place more items as time goes on. Isabel Pollard tells you candidly that, in building this collection, she has the help of outstanding Oriental art specialists. They search and find, then advise. She makes the final decisions.

These decisions are compounded of common sense based on a knowledge developed from her first childhood understanding to the very sophisticated approach to art that she discovered at Berkeley's University of California In early school days a child-hood interest in Japan and its culture was stimulated when a "charming Japanese lady" wearing kimono came to the school "in a small town in Central Illinois" and fascinated the class with an illus-trated lecture on her country.

* * * Learning continued when she went to work in Chicago and registered for off-hour classes in the university and

Next came the time in her life when she travelled to far-off places in the world—with her husband and alone. On these journeys, visits were made to the great art galler-ies and museums including those in Peking, China, in 1939; the Hermitage in Leningrad; the Armory Museum in Moscow and museums and galleries in the Middle East and the East.

After Mr. Pollard's death, his widow went to San Francisco to live. It was in this where art is well estab-ed and well endowed, that she decided to work toward a

It was a long, uphill fight. First there was need to build up credits, acquired at extension classes and in Chicago, to a place where University of California at Berkeley would consider them. This meant giving up most of her social life and going back to serious study, morning, noon and night.

Next came the task of permading the university to accept her (amongst thousands of others who converge on the Berkeley campus) and when that was accomplished of learning to compete against "young, bright minds trained to absorb and attuned to study."

It was in 1963 that she was enrolled for the full university enrolled for the full university of ur se, including drawing, painting, sculpture, esthetics of art, also physics and anthropology. She received her degree in January of this

Pollard answers that question easily.

Among the bits of business I've never got around to winding up is a fish story that was nipped off in mid-flight by lack of space. So today, I suggest we return to a little lost stream in the Ontario back concessions, where I once spent such a morning as Father Walton might have Ralph Allen, and editor. the creek on artillery map. We found it bridge cross ed a dirt running high and brown from an overnight rain, and looked anything but promising.

The farmer who owned the pastureland on either side reduced our hopes another notch.

"The crick?" he said, standing sturdy in bib overalls be tween barn and old red brick farmhouse, "Maybe back in my grand-dad's time there were trout in it. Now, there's Could we fish through his property anyway, just for the sake of wetting a line?

thoroughly wilted; but back at the oar we pulled on hip boots and rigged our rods. It was a pretty stream re-gardless with little cedar-shadowed pools, and deep runs under cutbanks, and miniature rapids that tinkled

Ralph decided to put in where the stream ducked into a cedar swamp at the foot of the pasture. He trudged off with fishing bag and wagging rod. I scrambled down the bank at the bridge.

By this time the sun had broken through clouds and was shining hot and bright. Also, the creek had cleared considerably, though it still ran high. I tied a Bucktail Boyal Coachman to the leader -a fly last used on a Vancou-ver Island river - and swam it down a run into the first

The white wing vanished un-der coffee-colored foam that edged a toppled elm trunk. I began to recover line in ual twitches; felt a brisk, hard pluck, and tipped my grand - dad had missed and grandson never discovered, a 12-inch Eastern brook trout with orange fins and speckled sides, each spot centred with a pinpoint of crimson fire.

I gloated, briefly, then slipped him in my creel and fished on down through an angler's Eden which, incredi-bly, had remained untouched for all of 40 years.

Near the cedar swamp, I came to a promising hole just as the farmer's kittenish bull announced his approach with earth-pawings and rum-blings. I monkied into a stream - shaded cedar, then worked my rod up after me by its tip. The bull began a leisured scratching of his sides

Presently I poked my rod through the boughs, dropped the fly in the tiny entrance riffle, and stripped off line enough to cover the pool. A rainbow which I swear to heaven was as long as my rm to the elbow latched on. With a leap and a crazy splurge he broke me. Soon after, the bull strolled away to seek deeper shade and I scrambled down to meet

Ralph. His bag was heavy; the swamp pools had proved no less rewarding.
"Nothing but suckers," he said. "Well, well! Let's see if we can keep it that way."

BREAD VAN CRASH

Fire Engine Victim Poor

A delivery man for a city bakery is in poor condition in hospital after his van was in collision with a fire truck on an emergency run this morning at a downtown intersection.

Suffering head and neck injuries is Robert' A. Hodge, 36, of 2525 Scott Street.

He was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital at 7:06 a.m. following a violent collision with a pumper truck at Douglas and Fort. Police said he was driving west on Fort and the fire truck was heading north on Douglas to a telephone booth fire at View and Blanshard.

Driver of the 7½-ton fire vehicle was identified by police.

Sewers First, Then Garbage Says Whitbread

Brentwood, Colquitz Preston Guilty Particularly Bad'

The Greater Victoria area and surrounding districts needs a new sewage system before it starts worrying about garbage disposal, metro health chief Dr. J. L. M.

Whitbread said today.

Commenting on reports that the Intermunicipal Committee will soon be giving priority to garbage disposal studies, Dr. Whitbread expressed alarm that it might take precedence over the more urgent sewage system need.

BRENTWOOD, COLQUITZ

"The bodies of animals are dumped with the rest of the garbage, it is true," he said. "But they are not left lying around. They are burned and it might take precedence over the more urgent sewage system need.

Victoria's finance committee has rejected a Greater Victoria Celebrations' Association request for funds to send a city float to Portland for the Rose Bowl Parade.

Committee members were told the cost of sending the float to the Oregon city would be in the neighborhood of $700.

The city has already earmarked $3,500 for float displays this year and has committed itself to appearances at the Seattle Seafair and the PNE parade in Vancouver.

Mayor A. W. Toone said the appearance of the float at Portland was most desirable but that 'we must consider our position in the municipality."

Ald. Clyde Savage suggested that the associa-tion make the same request next year when funds might be available for the extra parade.

FESTIVAL TO GET GRANT

minion Drama Festival will be informed that Victoria will honor an ex-mayor R. B. Wilson decision to donate $4,900 to the annual festival.

The pledge was made Thursday after the city fi nance committee heard a re quest from the freasurer asking for clarification of the city's stand on the grant. A letter from ex-mayor Wilson dated Dec. 2 commit ting the city to the grant was also read.

The city is still hoping that other members of the Inter-municipal Committee will help pick up the tab but is still awaiting definite word.
Should they decline the city will pay the entire $4,900.

There is almost an animalistic fervor wending its way across the country in a move to save the jobs of the pair who are embroiled in a very interesting fight with the CBC hierarchy.

This corner has never been completely enamoured with LaPierre, Watson or the program.

On more than one occasion, the program, through the co-hosts, has shown bad taste in broadcast journal-ism and has gone out of its way to create sensationalism for its sake

On the other hand, it has done a great service in the field of public affairs. There have been choice, but controversial, segments meant to nuture the knowledge of the 3,000,000 souls who braved the program each Sunday. Two quick examples, the recent surveys of car safety, and films showing the danger of aerosol cans

The interviews of public figures, carried on by pair and their assistants, often left much to

man who wrote a book in defence of Horsborough, the minister of Chatham, Ontario, who was convicted of contributing to juvenile delinquency, was one such Watson's assumptions of Smeaton's private life, suggesting Smeaton had homosexual dealings with Horsborough, was tasteless and an example of the bad interviews which dotted the program like measles. No, LaPierre and Watson are dispensible. Since nen cannot an employer hire or fire his employees at his will? But give them no credits for the way they mis handled the dismissal of the co-hosts in the initial stages. It was stupid bungling of the first water and spark which ignited the whole affair. It is the program which must not be allowed to be manhandled by the ham-handed bureaucrats of the

They should not be allowed to dictate and stifle the free-wheeling creativeness and imagination which gained the program the widest possible following in

LaPierre and Watson were primarily responsible for this function. But, surely, amongst the population of this country there are other free-thinkers who can do as able or even a better job within the latitudes

Gerda Cost $9,050, Queen Coverage Free

OTTAWA (CP) - The CBC devoted $9,050 and 107 minutes to coverage of Gerda Munsinger, blonde centrepiece in sex and security allegations, compared with two minutes and 55 seconds and no cash outlay for coverage of the Queen's visit to the West Indies,

The information was given to the Commons Wednesday by State Secretary Judy LaMarsh in written replies to . estions by Social Credit Leader Thompson. The replies said the CBC paid $5,000 to Mrs. Munsinger's agent and $3,000 to the Toronto Daily Star for a special interview with the woman Justice Minister Cardin says was involved with two or more Conservative cabinet ministe The Queen got a total of two minutes, 55 seconds in regular TV newscasts during the West Indies trip and film on this was obtained without cost from a British agency.

What Is the Spectrum?

In the world of ancient Rome, |

In the world of ancient Rome, the world specere meant to look—but through the ages, this old Latin world has taken an eeric turn. We borrowed it to make our word specter or spectre, meaning a spooky ghost. We also adopted it to create the scientific word spectrum and its plural form spectra.

A spectre, of course, is an impossible spook. Whether you see it or not depends upon your mental balance and the state of your imagination. The related word spectrum, however, is a scientific reality—but it also has some spooky features. It may or may not be seen, heard or felt—but the spectrum of science is factual and not imaginary.

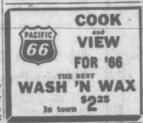

The spectrum of science reveals an orderly pattern of energy which takes many forms. The radiant energy of the sun enfolds light and heat, radio and X-rays. These and other forms of solar energy speed through space at about 186,000 miles a second. The different forms of energy travel

Sun Wave Lengths Bent

Sun Wave Lengths Bent

This tricky task was worked out long ago in the electromagnetic spectrum. Various wave lengths are arranged in order from the longest to the shortest. The different forms of energy have their own bands in the big electromagnetic spectrum. The radio spectrum can be felt as heat and the most dramatic band is the spectrum of visible light. When sunlight strikes a prism, its various wave lengths are bent at different and gles. They fan out separately and our eyes see them as the orderly colors of the rainbow.

The various spectra of energy are full of scientific information. Spectroscopy, the study of spectra, is one of the most useful and reliable fields of scientific tights.

Walkout

On Parking

MONTREAL (CP)—Some 3.500 longshoremen returning to work today end a three-day strike that tied up 76 ships in the port of Montreal.

The decision to return to work was made at a meeting Thursday night of 700 members of Local 375, International Longshoremen's Association (CLC).

Adrien Lemoyne, secretary-treasurer of the local, said the men were overwhelmingly in favor of accepting the union's recommendations.

The walkout, not sanctioned by the union began Tuesday when six dock workers were handed tickets for parking their cars illegally on National Harbors Board property.

The longshoremen said they were allowed to park their cars on the waterfront. Word spread quickly throughout the harbor and 3,500 men walked off their jobs.

The National Harbors Board later rescinded the tickets and promised the union it would create new parking facilities.
The strike continued. Union spokesmen blamed communications problems for previous failures to reach a settlement.

DAMAGED FREIHTER Archangel tied up at Ogden Point today to discharge part of the cargo of lumber that last Friday killed a man. The deck cargo rumbled over the side into Port Alberni harbor after the 24,000ton ship tilted suddenly. Longshoreman Arthur Dube, 38, of Alberni, was swept into the water and drowned. Ship will remain here several days while the deck cargo is removed and Yarrows workmen repair her damaged gear. Then she will return to scene of the mishap to finish loading lumber for Japan.

Among the bits of business I've never got around to winding up is a fish story that was nipped off in mid-flight by lack of space. So today, I suggest we return to a little lost stream in the Ontario back concessions, where I once spent such a morning as Fa-ther Walton might have

Ralph decided to put in where the stream ducked into a cedar swamp at the foot of pasture. He trudged off with fishing bag and wagging rod. I scrambled down the

Presently I poked my rod through the boughs, dropped the fly in the tiny entrance riffle, and stripped off line enough to cover the pool. A rainbow which I swear to heaven was as long as my arm to the elbow latched on. With a leap and a crazy plurge he broke me. Soon after, the bull strolled away to seek deeper shade and I scrambled down to meet Ralph. His bag was heavy; the swamp pools had proved no less rewarding.

"Nothing but suckers," he said. "Well, well! Let's see if we can keep it that way."

By subterfuge, misdirection and bold black lies, we pre-served our finny Eldorado through most of that spring. My weekends were taken and I never got back, but Ralph and writer-fisherman Bill Mitchell achieved several rich days on it
